A Good Grass But Not for Lawns!

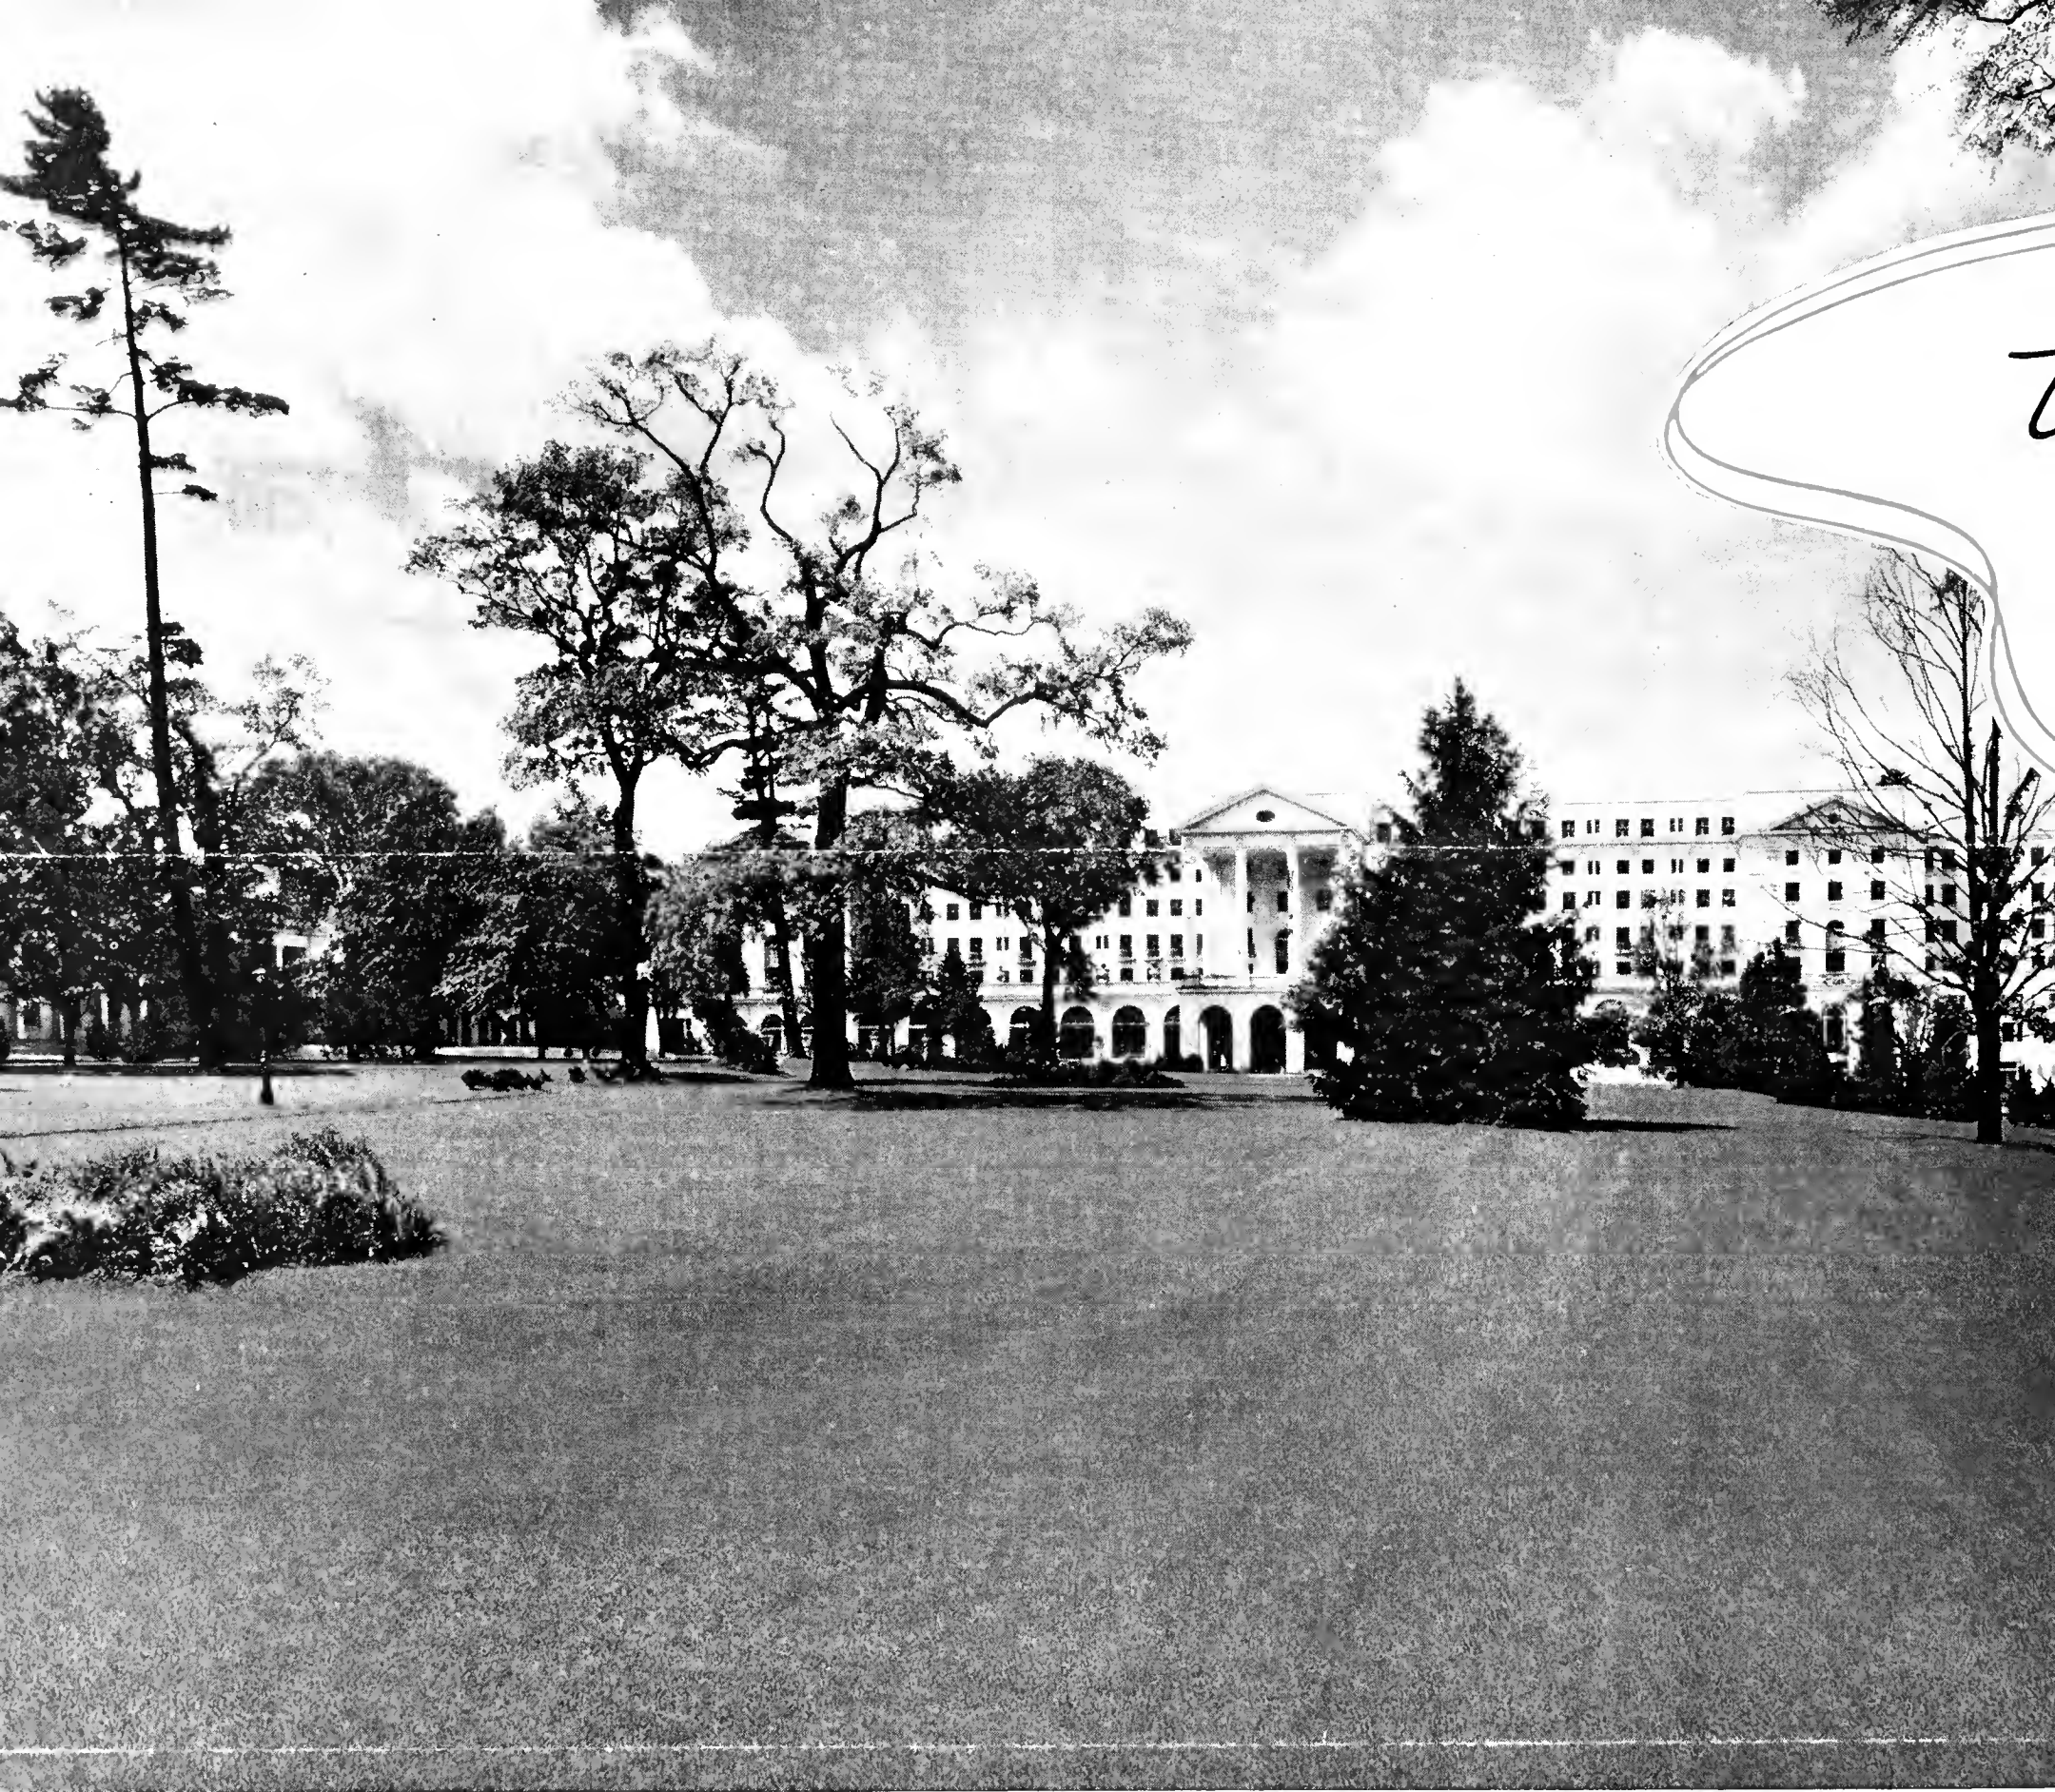

In farming operations Orchard Grass is considered quite valuable. In a lawn it is a pest, so we felt it timely to feature this grass in the current issue of Lawn Care.

Another enclosure is a sheet of graph paper convenient for charting a lawn. A customer in Richmond, Virginia made the suggestion. Extra sheets of this paper may be had for the asking.

Inside this folder you will find illustrated, one of the most beautiful vacation spots in America. Since Scott's Seed has been used there for ten consecutive years, we felt it appropriate to reproduce the fine turf which provides White Sulphur with such a delightful atmosphere.

Cordially yours,

A MOUNTAIN HAVEN WHERE THE CARES OF HOME AND BUSINESS MAY S

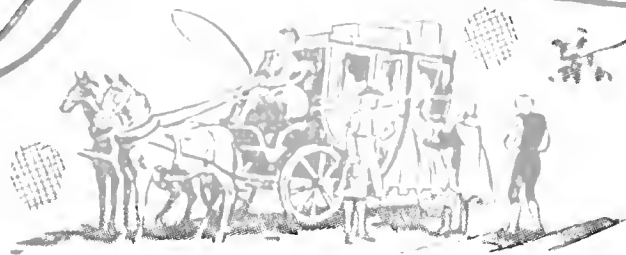

A cool, refreshing sweep of velvety turf surrounds The Greenbrier. That well-kept turf is as much a part of White Sulphur as its genial hospitality and the far-famed springs. * * * Only seed of unimpeachable quality is entrusted with the job of keeping such turf at its best.

White Sulphur WITH ITS TRADITIONAL ATMOSPHERE OF QUALITY GOES IN FOR GOOD TURF, TOO!

Early in the eighteenth century, guests of The Greenbrier were arriving by stagecoach. Later they came in the jolting cars of the first railway trains. Today they come by automobile over broad, smooth highways, by plane and in air-conditioned pullmans.

At the close of the Civil War this famous resort was the meeting ground for both the Northerner and Southerner. It continues to enjoy widespread popularity, each year adding new laurels to its world-wide reputation.

The seven-thousand-acre estate at White Sulphur includes expansive lawns as well as three sporty golf courses. On all these grassed areas, Scott's Seed has for the past ten years been doing faithful duty.
